

Final Prototype Interview Notes

Blake:

Male college student (non-CS), age 18 Likes to use IMDb for quick casual searches. Represents young men with lots of familiarity with websites.

- Initially thrown off by how different our home page was to IMDb's normal home page
- Very bothered by the spacing of our text formatting
- Liked the new watch list view. The bigger movie covers helped and the movie information was clear
- Was a bit thrown off by Figma. Was not used to looking at Figma's computer screen view and felt like everything was really zoomed in
- Found everything we asked him to find easily enough but was annoyed by the scrolling
- Thought that the share watchlist feature was a lot like Google's share feature
- Was confused when the symbols and words on the navigation bar were not always both linked to the next web page

Alan:

Male college student (non-CS), age 22: Likes to search IMDb with friends. Represents users with lots of familiarity with websites

- Disliked that the homepage felt like it was a mobile app interface
- Some confusion when removing a movie
- A back to top button could be nice since there is a lot of scrolling
- Search bar was easy to find and use
- Could make a more defined sorting feature for user reviews